

Engineering Manager

November 2018

We believe in the sustainable production of clean water.

DO YOU?

Desolenator is a clean-technology start-up developing a patented technology that uses just solar power to purify water from any source.

We will be executing our first projects with our technology over the coming year and you can help us design, test and build our best products yet. The Engineering Manager is a working manager role and will be a technical lead responsible for developing Desolenator's products. The role is responsible for leading a group of product engineers & technicians in developing solutions for new product development, product maintenance and customer support. The role will set-up and manage the Desolenator workshop in Maastricht enabling the company to support product development and testing as well as production of custom service. Additionally, the Engineering Manager will support & maintain operations & manufacturing to address continuous improvement in quality, reliability, cost and performance where applicable. The role will be required to work cross-functionally with other business areas including Research & Development, Commercial and Support functions.

You will also provide proactive and collaborative technical leadership and mentorship, with the ability to think creatively, and successfully implement product development objectives. You will be expected to manage quality of work in product engineering by tracking performance metrics in product quality, schedule and cost. This role is expected to coach, mentor and manage the performance of engineers and technicians in the team, as well as develop and implement standards of work and documentation.

Required skills & experience:

- B.S. Mechanical Engineering or Sustainable/Renewable Energy Engineering
- 3-5 years product engineering experience and leadership roles in product development, design and new product launch
- CAD proficiency (preferably in Autodesk Inventor) - 2D drawings, 3D modelling and simulation
- Strong written/verbal communication skills in English– collaborative style
- Positive can-do attitude, energized by challenges, curious and a team player.
